To whom it may concern,

I am concerned about gas drilling around my property in Columbia County, Pennsylvania. I am not opposed to drilling for gas in the Marcellus Shale, but I believe the surface of land needs to be protected from pollution. The Pa. Dept. of Environmental Protection should have strict guidelines for this drilling and frequent inspections (in depth) of the drilling, wells, chemicals, sludge, run off, surface, and under surface effects of the process.

In no case should the surface land in rural Pennsylvania be polluted to the point drinking water is tainted in any way, farming or wildlife are endangered, people should have to leave their homes or loose the use of their surface land.

The drilling of these wells are suppose to be deep and horizional. As such I believe, with careful oversight the gas should be removable without destroying or polluting the enviornment, productivity, rural atmosphere, and peacefulness that has been a virtue and right of the people who own land and live in Pennsylvania.
