Parents have the right to remove their children from district public schools. When parents make that difficult decision they have done a lot of careful consideration. It's no easy task for most. They are also the tax payers of these districts. The district public school should lose all funding for each child removed. Only if a child continues to use the district school for things such as sports should the district school receive a small amount of money to cover costs that aren't passed to the parents (uniforms, game transportation, coach salary-divided). Governor Wolf is a power hungry dictator attempting to stop parents' right to choose charter schools to regain control over residents' children. Vote NO district schools should not receive funding for children not attending the district school.
