Governor Wolf should not be bypassing the legislative process to enact one-sided charter school reform. Reforming Pennsylvania's public charter school law should be a collaborative effort with the state legislature, and should involve all entities who have a vested interest in Pennsylvania's children. This includes not only those who oppose public charter schools, but those who support them – including the families who benefit by their existence. The proposed regulation will do nothing to address legitimate issues with the existing law, and are a misguided attempt to restrict school choice by making things more difficult for public charter schools.

Thank you,
